Who Pays The Rent?

Newspaper accounts following a fire frequently carry the words, "The loss was fully covered by insurance", meaning that the value of the burned property was fully insured.

The total loss can not be completely tabulated, however, until life has been resumed in the rebuilt home. That costly period between the settlement of the fire loss and the restoration of the property can only be bridged by rent insurance.

The Tappan property, recently destroyed, was so protected and this office was pleased to be able to reimburse the owners by the payment of the rental value of the home for the time which would have been required to restore the property. A truly substantial sum.

This complete protection costs little extra and may be provided thru this office to protect the income of your property during its interrupted use following fire.

EXTRA HAZARDS

Winter is a time of extra hazards both for those who drive automobiles and for those who get in their path.

So far this year there has been but little coasting here and no coasting accidents. On previous years the accidents have been both numerous and serious, sometimes fatal.

The Governor's Committee on Street and Highway Safety has made a special plea for care in avoiding accidents of this sort.

"The same severe weather conditions which bring out the sleds in greater numbers," says the committee statement, "make operation more hazardous for motor vehicle operators. The combination of these two circumstances creates a most serious situation.

"Reports from communities throughout the State reveal virtual batles recently between coasters and police who sought to protect them at dangerous spots. Despite orders, boys and girls continued to coast. Just as soon as police cruisers left a hill, the coasters swarmed over it again. On a recent Sunday in Lawrence the general police alarm had to be sounded twice to bring out every available officer. A street department wagon full of sand followed a police car around to the most dangerous intersections, but in many instances boys covered the sand with snow as soon as the police departed.

"City streets are no place to coast unless they have been set aside especially for this purpose by the authorities. The mere posting of the streets in the local press, however, is not sufficient protection. Officials should partially close the coasting streets with wooden horses, to slow down the entrance and exit of motor vehicles and should sand the foot of the hill where public safety requires it.

"The responsibility for accidents to children coasting on unprotected streets rests squarely with parents. It is up to them to know where their youngsters are going when they leave the house with their sleds.

"The fact still remains, however, that children will coast at the nearest good hill no matter how hazardous the slide. Motorists must make allowances for this. When they approach any intersection at the foot of a hill, they should be on the alert for possible coasters. They should also bear in mind that the same presence of snow or ice which makes the coasting good, may make it hard for them to bring their motor vehicles to a stop quickly or without skidding."

LET'S SEE A GOOD SHOW

In the days of good Queen Bess, when the populace wanted to enjoy a really good show they went to see one of Will Shakespeare's. And thoroughly they enjoyed it. They shuddered at and hissed the villainies of Macbeth or roared with laughter at the slapstick comedy of Falstaff and his fellows. Ophelia's sweet madness, the gloom of the melancholy Dane, the tragic love of Romeo and Juliet, Malvolio's posturings, and the fairy dances of "The Tempest" were all excellent entertainment for the ordinary man and woman of three hundred and odd years ago.

There have been made in those three hundred years, we would all agree, tremendous strides in education. More of us can and do read. Most of us have, we would say, a greater appreciation of lit-

But what has happened to the works of poor Will Shakespeare? The thing that would, we dare say, have seemed most terrible to Will himself, who thoroughly enjoyed a roaring good time and who probably never thought, certainly never spoke of his "art". They have been set in so high a place that the common man is sure he could neither understand nor enjoy them. He studies in school the plays that he must and leaves the others well alone.

The other day a C. C. C. boy, having exhausted the resources of his camp library in detective and wild west fiction, picked up a volume of Shakespeare. He chose Hamlet for his diversion. "Why", he said, and his expression was one of extreme surprise, "I like it. Honestly, I like it".

Today Shakespeare's plays are put on with an artistry of effect and a gorgeousness of costuming that would delight Will's heart, yet we go to see them with a virtuous feeling that we are being quite highbrow and adding to the sum of our culture.

So, when the High School Dramatic Club plans to produce "The Merchant of Venice", we think that it is a tremendous undertaking. So it is, but not because it is Shakespeare nor yet because it is "highbrow". The production is bound to be an expensive one because of the costumes and settings. The play is longer by two acts than the average modern comedy. There are in it more characters, which increases the difficulties of rehearsals; many of the parts are long and consequently harder to learn. It is true, too, that the club should receive the support of Arlington people in this undertaking.

But, aside from that, "The Merchant of Venice" is a good show. Shylock is a most villainous villain, though today he steals our sympathy. Portia is a heroine both lovely and intelligent, while the hero-name him Antonio or Bassanio-is noble and handsome. There are plot and subplot, humor and sentiment. The setting is glamorous, the costumes colorful. So, let's see a good show. Let's go to the Merchant of Venice.

about the concert last Sunday, but never have we heard an Arlington audience so enthusiastic. We were mighty proud of John Gruber, the soloist, and the writer is very willing to admit that the director is his brother. Now things are lining up for the next concert in March. When we went home for lunch Wednesday noon the new music was plumped down in front of us and we were told to get to work on the flute parts. Now we take orders from the kid brother and like it.

We understand that Miss Esther Wyman is willing to run for Park Commissioner this March. The Citizens' Committee had already practically decided to endorse George Shirley and Edward Buckley for the two vacancies, which must be filled, but Mr. Buckley has decided not to run. In that case it would seem the thing to do to endorse Miss Wyman, who would be a great asset to the Commission by reason of her profession. which is landscape architecture.

A QUALIFIED CANDIDATE

To the Editor of

In a previous letter to your paper I attempted, perhaps at some length. to elaborate upon the qualifications of one of the candidates for office in the coming Town election.

I also attempted to stress the importance of casting all other considerations aside for the moment, in order that a representative vote may be

Of three of the major offices to be filled, it is toward the filling of a second one that this letter is directed. This office is one of the greatest responsibility. Second only to the School Department in the matter of the disbursements of the funds of the Town. it is of the greatest importance that these disbursements shall be presided over by men who are endowed with honesty, together with the intention and ability, to prevent the stream of expenditures, where large amounts of money are involved, from flowing through those channels, through which so often flows unnecessary waste, and direct it through those channels whence comes the fruition of value received, by the most careplied business methods.

Now there is a citizen mentioned for this office in whom the citizens may be justified in looking for the very type of character which the duties of this office prescribe, for he has already proved by a former tenure of the office that he possesses it. His knowledge of the requirements of the office were acquired in earlier days, those days when his associates were men who, although their time was directed toward their private business pursuits, yet because of their intense interest in the second son, the elder being four well-being of the Town, gave unyears on the 22nd of this month. At the close of the installation, Mrs. Wolmer presented to Mrs. Nela gift of money and flowers and an honorary membership in the chapter. Mrs. Wadleigh has served as an officer for twenty years, for fifteen of them as secretary.

The installation was preceded by a supper in Odd Fellows Hall. This was in charge of Mrs. Edna Mitchell. while Mrs. Sarah Hewson had charge of the decorations.

GRANTS THREE PERMITS.

Last week Building Inspector William E. Mason granted two permits, one to the Fellsway Wrecking Corporation to tear down for the estate of Elvira Fisher the one-family house at 269 Massachusetts avenue—the Tappan house. The job is estimated at $300. The other is to John Doherty to repair fire damage at 99 Bow street, $200. On Monday a permit was given to Daniel Cronin to enlarge the garage doors at 20 Massachusetts avenue, $240.

Dr. Tehyi Hsieh Lecture Interesting and Colorful

The lecture given by Dr. Tehyi Hsieh last Friday evening in Robbins Memorial Town Hall under the auspices of the First Univerwhich was held Wednesday evening bins Memorial Town Hall on the salist church was both colorful and at the Hotel Bradford: Mrs. Dennis ninth of February. This undertaking interesting. There were exclamations of admiration for the embroidered panels, great birds on a background of orange satin, which were hung against the velvet drop curtain, and for the Chinese costumes of the girls who ushered. Particularly lovely was the cape worn by the head usher, pink satin heavy with silver and gold embroidery bordered with tiny mirrors set in gilt and with fur and lined with peacock blue. The tapestries and some of the costumes were the property of the Chinese National government while the other costumes belonged to Dr. Hsieh, who is a member of a mandaria

> Dr. Hsieh proved to be as vivid as his background. He learned the first of his perfect English from a Scotchman and has never lost the burr he acquired then. He has, however, added to his vocabulary American slang which he used effectively with a broad Chinese smile. He is, moreover, a natural mimic and pointed his words with action-marching with the army, making a clashing motion in his description of a hari

After his introduction by Raymond H. Stearns, president of the Universalist Men's Society, he soke of the spirit of cooperation he had observed in the United States. The people in this country, he said, are organized to make communities perfect. Perfection starts at home and spreads abroad.

China's hopes, fears, and aspirations were treated in his lecture. It is not where China stands that is important, he said, but where Manchus have been absorbed. Because of the missionaries, opium has been taken out of China. There is no feeling of vengeance against Japan, only hope for the future.

Dr. Hsieh paid a tribute to President Roosevelt for his vision in recognizing Russia. Of all charities, he said, the greatest is being charitable to the uncharitable, and

A Christmas or Thanksgiving basket given to a family by the Council does not necessarily mean that the family is being aided by the Council. The basket means a holiday cheer which would be lacking and the recipient who receives it may never have received any aid from the Council. Aiding a family means giving help at regular inter-
